Dear customers

2012 has been quite eventful year. That's why we want to inform you about our past activities and how we want to proceed.

Thanks for your interest!

Kind regards

Peter Müller

Historyfacts' Publications

After publication of the Michael Winninger's (St. Valentin, Austria) German Book Nibelungenwerk we arranged a professional translation by David Kosh. After that, and after serious technical problems that delayed the the publication several times, we finalized the book. The English language copy is available as OKH Toy Factory since mid january 2013. We are happy with the result.

Historyfacts provided some content to the production chapters of the book. These based on our research on the Mark IV Tank and its derivate, as well as on additional investigation on the production of Ferdinand and Jagdtiger.

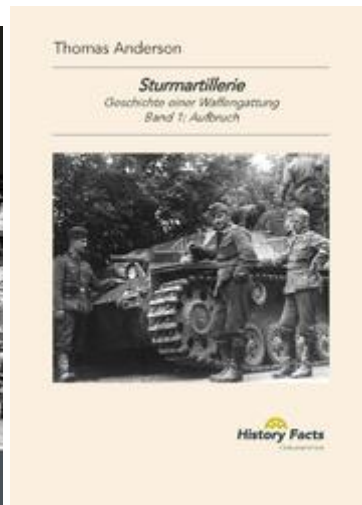

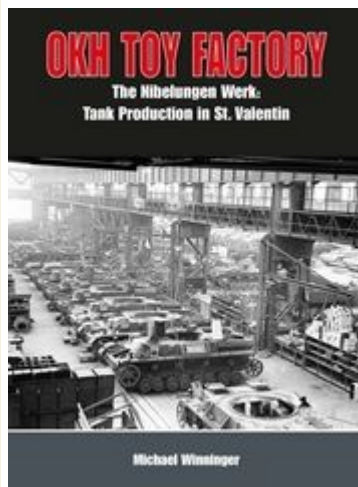

We are now working on the German edition of Thomas Anderson's Vorwärts immer - Rückwärts nimmer, which will be published as "Sturmartillerie . Geschichte einer Waffengattung". Publishing is scheduled for June 2013. This is a three volume book:

Further are planned and in progress with Thomas Anderson:

Volume II: Attack

Volume III: Defence

Historyfacts' Reseaches

Our work on the publications "Tank Production in the Thrid Reich", "Panzerkampfwagen IV" und "Panzerkampfwagen Panther" are ongoing with good prograss. In doing so we must note, that the hugh amount of information available uses our resources to the limit - more than searching missing document could do. We are sure, that doing a good job in screening, sorting, selecting and evaluating will be to our readers advantage.

On the Panzerkampfwagen IV topic, we are working together with Wolfgang Zimmermann, he himself is supported by Notger Schlegtendal; Working on the Panzerkampfwagen Panther is done with Edi Eberl und Frank Koehler. This integration of expertise in teams assures a broad, diversified base of the work and will give us verified results!

Beside working in official archives and in company's archives, our own archive is a worthwhile and always available document collection. During the last year we were, by trading and as a result of many talks, in the position to further improve our archive's content - in quantity and quality:

We have now more than 1700 publications covering our topics at hand.

The number of Microfilms at our own archive increased to more than 1200.

By working together with a researcher at NARA, we are getting new, never published photographs and selected documents, that couldn't be found in other areas.

Especially advantageous circumstances allows us, to visit and work in a never used company archive. We got arranged the date and are looking forward to visiting that company. We will tell you more about that when it's time to...

We are trading documents, photographs and microfilms with other authors and private persons. We'd like to heartfully thank all these persons and institutions for working together with us! If you happen to have access to documents, photos that you think of possibly being of interest for Historyfacts, please contact us - many thanks!

Obituary: Thomas L. Jentz

Following an extended illness endured with courage and patience, Tom Jentz passed away end of December 2012. With his passing we have lost a technical writer and author whose lifework is impossible to overestimate! First collaborating with Walter Spielberger and the artist and researcher Hilary Doyle, then subsequently continuing to work with Doyle alone, Tom authored a number of standard works on the German Armored Troops, and on selected individual German tanks and vehicles of WWII. His doctrine was invariably that only documented facts should be published and all speculation excluded. These were the professional ethics he lived up to, creating in the process a comprehensive body of work with his own publication series "Panzer Tracts" – until poor health sadly denied him the opportunity of completing it entirely. Supported by a well-known author, Hilary Doyle will now continue and complete Tom's work.

I knew Tom as a constructively critical contemporary with strong personal views. In discussions with him about the subject we both so enjoyed, he expressed his opinions in an unequivocal manner – particularly when they differed from my own. Having the possibility to measure oneself verbally and as a fellow author with someone on a par in my own specialist field was an opportunity simply too good to miss. Those discussions were highly enriching and I will remember them for ever!
